

Scholarship for Tunisian Student offered by the Government of Malta for a Master of Arts in Humanitarian Action at the University of Malta

The Scholarship is designed to facilitate the formation of a young Tunisian professional in a key area, namely humanitarian action. Malta is an ideal location for the realization of this goal, not only because of the relevant expertise it offers, but also because of the strong historic and cultural ties it enjoys with Tunisia.

Objective

Why sponsor a student in Humanitarian Action?

Tunisia is undertaking its transformation from authoritarian to democratic rule under challenging circumstances. One of the many severe challenges it is facing is the instability and civil strife across its border in Libya. In the first months after the Tunisian revolution, the country had to deal with the influx of hundreds of thousands of refugees fleeing the 2011 Libyan armed conflict. This situation has again worsened in the last couple of years with increasing lawlessness and fighting in Libya. Today, Tunisia – which is facing serious economic challenges – reportedly hosts upwards of 1 million Libyans – a tenth of the Tunisian population.

The continued regional instability calls for a high degree of expertise in humanitarian action. It is important that Tunisians have the capacity and professional knowledge to take the lead in shaping both policy and practice related to humanitarian action in the country and the wider region at the international, regional, and local levels.

Humanitarian action today emphasizes local ownership, participation and bottom-up approaches. Thus, it is only logical from this perspective to develop Tunisian expertise on an issue which, unfortunately, is set to continue to be prominent in the foreseeable future.

The Master of Arts in Humanitarian Action of the University of Malta combines theory and practice in such a way as to enable the students to work on a range of issues related to humanitarian action, from humanitarian law and diplomacy, via forced migration to management in humanitarian action, all issues of particular interest in the Tunisian context.

The course

Master of Arts in Humanitarian Action

The Master's programme approaches humanitarian and development action from both a practical and an analytical perspective. Students develop the necessary knowledge and skills to critically analyse humanitarian action, and work effectively in the humanitarian and development field. The programme is taught by a combination of in-house experts and experienced guest lecturers. Candidates for the M.A. in Humanitarian Action will gain a comprehensive understanding of:

- The variety of humanitarian and more long-term responses to crises across the globe
- How such responses are shaped and what consequences they have
- The institutional and legal framework for humanitarian action
- Medical and public health aspects of humanitarian action
- Management and humanitarian action
- Anthropology and humanitarian action
- Media and humanitarian action
- Applied ethics in humanitarian action
- Human security, forced migration and humanitarian action
- Humanitarian evaluation in theory and practice
- Applied research methods in humanitarian action

The M.A. also offers the possibility of placements for those students who wish to expand their hands-on experience of what working in the humanitarian and development fields entails.

The programme is intended for individuals working in, or aspiring to work in, humanitarian agencies, multilateral aid institutions, NGOs and private foundations, government agencies, large corporations with in-house development/outreach work, and think tanks and research centres.

The M.A. enables students to develop a range of skills, including:

- The ability to analyse critically humanitarian and development action, how it is framed, structured, and delivered
- The ability to plan, programme, implement, and evaluate effectively humanitarian and/or development interventions
- The ability to navigate among the numerous players involved in humanitarian and development assistance
- Confident oral presentation skills on the topics covered
- Analytical writing in the area of humanitarian and development cooperation

The ideal applicant should have a serious and manifest commitment to humanitarianism, with some prior experience in the humanitarian and/or development sector and a strong motivation to pursue postgraduate studies. The applicant should have intercultural communication skills. Knowledge of languages beyond English and Arabic is an asset.

Entry Requirements

Admission Requirements

1) A recognised degree as deemed relevant by the Faculty Board of Arts.

Given the multidisciplinary character of humanitarian work, students are expected to hold a first degree second class or equivalent, in any subject considered to be relevant by the Admissions Committee.
